Promotion Meeting for Dairy Industry Is Called June 18

Farmers who are interested in going into the dairy business have been invited to a meeting in the Hempstead courtroom Thursday, June 18, according to an announcement by the Dairy Committee of Hope Chamber of Commerce in yesterday's Star.

Thirty Grade A dairies were established in this county between October 1, 1951, and February 1, 1953 — a matter of a year and four months — and the big milk buyers want between 30 and 40 more. The Jordan company seeks 20 to 25 additional, and Midwest wants 10 or 15 more.

Currently there are 48 dairies operating in Hempstead county producing an annual income of $300,000. It is the kind of farm income that particularly appeals to the people of today, for the milk purchases are paid for every 15 days — putting ready cash in the hands of the farmer at all times instead of concentrating it during the fall harvest months as in the old cotton era.

Basically the milk industry is as good as anything the farmer can tie to. Except for butter all milk products are booming. The demand never was higher for whole milk, cheese, and other processed milk items. And the butter situation will improve after the industry has finally absorbed the shock of admitting margarine to free competition in the market places.

And dairying is an exceptionally attractive method of rehabilitating the farmlands which were put out of commission a decade ago when the Southwestern Proving Ground seized 50,000 acres. Every town and county wants a prosperous farm operation, and, if possible, the kind of farm operation which puts the maximum of people on the land and keeps them there, prosperous and satisfied.

South Korea Against New Peace Plans

By BILL SHINN

SEOUL, June 5 — South Korea's acting foreign minister today again denounced the United Nations and its latest armistice plan as "dishonorable" and "cowardly." He predicted bloodshed if Indian troops or Communist representatives enter South Korea after an armistice.

The U. N. plan, reported to have made a quick truce highly probable, has drawn uninhibited attacks from South Korean government sources.

Although Minister Pyun Yung Tai did not indicate whether he spoke for his government, he said in an interview:

"We are merely disappointed about United States world leadership."

"I have never come across more dishonorable — and more cowardly — plans. We are greatly disgusted with such an ignominious truce. We have now lost confidence in what the United Nations says. The say non-forcible repatriation of POWs but what they are actually doing will result in forcible repatriation."

He predicted prisoners unwilling to return to the Communists would "commit suicide from mere disgust."

Pyun, one of the loudest critics of the U. N. proposal, met with President Syngman Rhee in the morning, and with Rhee, U. S. Ambassador Ellis Briggs and Gen. Mark Clark, U. N. Far East commander, in the afternoon.

Before the afternoon meeting Pyun said he did not believe Rhee would accept Clark's advice that the aging South Korean president co-operate in concluding an armistice.

By DONALD J. GONZALES

WASHINGTON (UP) — South Korea voiced violent new objections to the United Nations truce plan today as Allied officials, optimistic over chances of ending the three-year war, prepared new instructions for U. N. negotiators at Panmunjom.

South Korean Ambassador Dr. You Chan Yang said in an interview that the "concessions" made by the Allies to the Communists "are nothing but total appeasement." He said the Allied offer was "shortsighted," endangered the United States to an atomic attack and at the same time "sells Korea down the river."

On the basis of the secret reply the Reds made yesterday to the Allied truce plan, authorities believed the North Korean and Chinese Communists are now willing to sign an armistice.

The Allied instructions expected to go to U. N. negotiators today could be counterproposals, seeking clarification of the Red offer, or a request for further delay.

There were strong hints in official quarters that the United States — politely but firmly — would tell the South Koreans that their objections would not be allowed to block a truce.

Hopes Airforce Cut Won't Be Political Issue

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich.) said today he hopes Democratic senators "don't make a political matter" of the sizing dispute about Air Force cutbacks.

Ferguson, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee now considering new funds and spending limits on all defense agencies, said in an interview that even the Eisenhower budget might be safely "reduced in some items."

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, retiring Air Force head, concluded late yesterday three full days of testimony in opposition to cutbacks proposed for the Air Force in the Eisenhower budget.

These would trim former President Truman's request for new funds by five billion dollars and over the 1955 air power goal from 143 to 120 wings.

Vandenberg insisted that a 143-wing Air Force is the minimum level needed to meet the threat of expanding Soviet Russian air power. A wing contains from 30 heavy bombers to 75 smaller aircraft.

Secretary of Defense Wilson, who engineered the Air Force cutback with the aid of Deputy Secretary of Defense Kyes and Assistant Secretary of Defense McNell, will return to the Senate committee's witness stand Monday.

Asked to comment on Vandenberg's testimony, Wilson said: "I think the people will be surprised to know how close together we are."

Speaking at the Iowa State Bar Association meeting in Sioux City last night, Wilson said funds available to the Air Force "are ample to continue a rapid buildup in its effective strength."

He said the money program had been analyzed not only by defense officials "but by the National Security Council and the President himself."

"I know of no one in the whole world more competent to judge such matters than our President," Wilson said.

"Apparently I am in the peculiar position of a son who goes to his dad for money and his dad insists on the son taking more money than he wants or needs or even thinks is good for him."

Ferguson's comment came after he had listened to a series of questions put to Vandenberg by committee Democrats, including Hill of Alabama, McClellan of Arkansas and Maybank of South Carolina.

Their questions indicated they might fight to restore the long-range 143-wing goal and whatever billions that go needed.

Ferguson emphasized that the Air Force had been unable to spend from four to eight billions voted by Congress in recent years, and that it had fallen short of all plane production goals since start of the Korean War in mid-1950.

Vandenberg and other Air Force generals conceded this was true but said that, until Congress votes the funds, they can not even place orders for aircraft that require two or more years for production.

GOP's Seeking Control Over U. S. Jobs

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Republicans hunted for a new approach today to give them control over an assortment of federal jobs filled by Democratic appointees who have been given civil service status.

Opposition from veterans' groups and Democrats have frustrated GOP efforts in both House and Senate to take over these jobs through riders to appropriations bills.

Chairman Frank Carlson (R-Kans.) of the Senate Civil Service committee told a reporter he is consulting the Civil Service Commission on ways of achieving the goal through separate legislation.

A separate bill permitting dismissal of the Democratic holdovers would be easier to pass than the appropriations riders because it would require only a simple majority vote.

Carlson failed in an effort to attach such riders to the state-justice-commerce departments appropriations bill this week because a two-thirds vote was required.

His riders would give the secretaries of those departments a free hand to fire employees who did not obtain their jobs through the competitive civil service system but were "blanketed in" to civil service jobs.

So much electricity is used to produce aluminum that the metal is sometimes called "packaged electricity."

Vaccination for Bang's Disease Starts

Calfood vaccination of replacement heifers 4 to 8 months of age for Bang's Disease got underway June 1 in Hempstead County state agent Oliver L. Adams today.

The schedule for Joe Hamilton, vaccinator, through the week ending June 12 has been mailed cattle owners. Mr. Adams anticipates sufficient requests to utilize the services of Mr. Hamilton through June.

Any dairy or beef cattle owner with heifers of the proper age for immunization should advise County Agent Adams by June 17. Mr. Hamilton is expected to be in Hempstead County in early October to vaccinate for Bang's Disease any replacement heifers too young at this time.

Only Certain Insurance Plans Accepted

The Department of Revenues reminded Arkansas motorists today that only certain forms of insurance are acceptable as proof of ability to pay damage claims in the event of an accident under the State's new Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Law which becomes effective June 11.

Let it clearly be understood that this is not a compulsory insurance law. Nowhere in the law is a motorist required to carry insurance. The law demands only that motor vehicle owners and drivers shall be prepared to deposit security for the damage caused in traffic accidents. The maximum security deposit is $11,000. They may do this by carrying insurance or by depositing security with the Department of Revenues.

The experience of most of the other 42 states that have adopted similar laws, however, indicates that the great majority of motorists will elect to protect themselves before they have an accident, by taking out insurance. The same experience shows that a great many motorists have suffered unnecessary inconvenience and even hardship because they did not understand that the law could accept only those forms of insurance which cover damage claims resulting from motor vehicle accidents.

Some motorists in other states, for instance, thought their fire and theft insurance protected them against the penalties of their financial responsibility law. Others believed their collision insurance was enough. Still others thought personal accident, and even life insurance, would do the trick. Unfortunately, none of them would be correct. They insured their own or against personal injury to himself or damage to his own property, but they did not cover the damage he did to others, which is the goal of a safety responsibility law.

The great majority of Arkansas motorists, if they elect to protect their motoring privileges through insurance, should be sure they have what is known as automobile liability insurance or a combination policy that includes it. This is the kind that is written for the owners of private passenger cars. The law provides that it shall be accepted automatically as proof of ability to meet damage claims resulting from an accident, providing it was in effect at the time of the accident and was sufficient to meet damage claims up to $11,000.

The law provides that the Commissioner of Revenues may accept any other form of liability insurance which, in his judgment, will cover damage claims resulting from the reported accident. The average motorist, however, should not concern himself about this form of insurance because it principally applies to business or industrial owners. In case of doubt, the surest way to settling the question is to ask your insurance company, agent or broker if your policy protects you against the security provisions of the Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Law.

Department Store Sales Show Gain

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Customers flocked to department stores in the Eighth Federal Reserve District last week, with sales soaring 18 per cent above those of a year ago.

Hot weather was a factor in the sales gain and the fact that Memorial Day fell on Saturday this year and Friday in 1952 made a big difference, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported.

The gain in sales last week averaged 29 per cent in the Little Rock area, 21 per cent in Memphis, Tenn., 17 per cent in the St. Louis area, and 25 per cent in seven smaller cities of the district.

District sales were up eight per cent for the four weeks that ended Saturday and six per cent for the year to date, as compared with 1952.

Reds Overrun UN Positions Along Front

By FORREST EDWARDS

SEOUL (AP) — A beefed-up North Korean battalion ripped through a main line Allied position on the Eastern Front today and held stubbornly against counterattacking South Koreans.

Some 750 to 1,000 Reds overran three ROK outposts ahead of the main line, then slammed through the line itself in four spots east of Lake's Castle, where bloody fighting has raged for a week, the Eighth Army said.

Another North Korean battalion tore into a South Korean outpost on Bloody Ridge on the East-Central Front. The ROKs met the attack ahead of the outpost but were hurled back in desperate hand-to-hand fighting, the Army said.

Two prongs of the attack on Lake's Castle area penetrated the main Allied line about 500 yards apart, caving in South Korean positions.

Counter-attacking ROK 12th Division troops — in battle almost steadily since last Monday — slammed the Reds back about 250 yards but were cut short as the North Koreans hurled grenades from higher slopes.

At last report the battle—which raged through the night—continued at close range.

In Bloody Ridge, the furiously-attacking Communists stormed the outpost slopes and, at last report, the ROKs had withdrawn to the Outpost Center and were streaming mortar and artillery fire on the Reds.

Fighting has been almost continuous on the Eastern Front hill mass since Monday night when the North Koreans got their first foothold on the tip of Lake's Castle terrain.

Despite repeated South Korean counter-attacks, the Reds lashed further ahead and now hold about one-half of the forward ridge of the Castle.

On the Western Front other South Korean troops killed an estimated 100 of 300 Chinese who attacked an outpost southwest of Kelly Hill before midnight Friday.

"The Reds pounded the outpost with 3,000 mortar and artillery shells in the 2½ hour fight."

Taft Proposal Gets Plenty of Backing

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators Wiley (R-Wis.) and H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) endorsed today a proposal by Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) that the U. S. seek a military alliance with Britain, France and other allies to counter communism in the Far East.

Wiley, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said in an interview he thinks an alliance similar to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in Europe ought to be formed in the Pacific.

But whereas Taft suggested the U. S. "disentangle" itself from the U. N. to form such a Far Eastern pact, Wiley said it ought to be undertaken under the U. N. charter's provision for regional arrangements.

"We have separate treaties with Australia, New Zealand, Japan and the Philippines," Wiley noted. "The time is coming when all of these nations should be drawn, along with England and France, into a NATO for the Pacific."

In a separate statement, Wiley said U. S. allies in Europe have "sharply increased their defense expenditures" in the last three years despite slim pocketbooks and said this held out hope that even those NATO allies with fewest resources "are pulling and will continue to pull their full share of our mutual security load."

Smith, who heads a foreign relations subcommittee on the Far East, said he always had been in favor of "stronger mutual security agreements in the Far East."

He said this might take the form of a military alliance such as Taft suggested. But the New Jersey senator said he has some doubt that the U. S. would want to agree, as it did in the NATO pact, that an attack on any one of the members would be regarded as an attack on all.

He pointed out that the French already are under Communist attack in Indo-China, adding that he doesn't believe this country would want to send troops to that area although it already is helping the French with military supplies.

"I am glad to see that Taft wants the British and French included in any collective security arrangement to Pacific," Smith said.

Private Power Accused by SPA Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private power companies were accused today by Clyde T. Ellis, executive manager of the National Rural Electric Cooperation Association, of leading the fight to eliminate the Southwestern Power Administration's continuing fund.

This is the fund used by SPA, a government agency, in buying and selling power from and to private companies and rural co-ops.

Ellis said the National Association of Electric Companies, which he called the lobbying and propaganda organization of the power companies, had criticized the continuing fund for several years and sought to have Congress abolish it.

This year former President Truman recommended appropriation of $5,000,000 for the continuing fund. President Eisenhower suggested just $3,738,000 and the House voted $180,000.

Ellis discussed the issue in a letter to Alex Huggins, manager of the Virginia Association of Electric Cooperatives, Richmond, Va., who had inquired why Virginia co-ops are supporting the fight to restore the continuing fund.

Reports Hint Korean Truce Almost Assured

By ROBERT D. TUCKMAN

PANMUNJOM (AP) — Allied and Communist negotiators met in tight secrecy for 10 minutes today at a mushrooming reports of near agreement on the key issue of prisoner exchange bolstered hopes for an armistice in Korea.

"There was no official hint of what went on inside the conference but an authoritative South Korean source said: 'No new proposal was made by either side.'"

"The Reds asked for and got a recess until 11 a. m. tomorrow (6 p. m. EST Saturday). The South Korean source indicated — without elaboration — that progress might be made then."

He described the atmosphere inside the conference hut today as businesslike — "neither good nor bad."

Other observers said the U. N. Command probably asked for clarification of an hour-long statement read Thursday by North Korean Gen. Nam Il.

This was reported to have been a counter-proposal virtually paraphrasing the latest U. N. plan for breaking the long prisoners exchange deadlock, last major barrier to a Korean truce. The Reds were said to have suggested five changes, none of them major.

In Western and Communist capitals around the world, hopes mounted that the end of the bloody Korean War was in sight — perhaps before the conflict winds up its third year on June 25.

There was optimism even in Moscow where the official government newspaper Izvestia said: "It is clear that the sides, participating in the talks are extremely close to signing an agreement."

Only South Korea was there in deep gloom.

Perl Gets 5 Years for Perjury

NEW YORK, (UP) — William Perl, former Columbia University physics instructor, was sentenced today to five years in federal prison, the maximum allowable on perjury conviction for denying that he knew convicted atom spies Julius Rosenberg and Morton Sobell.

The tall, grim-faced jet propulsion expert, 34, showed no emotion as Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan handed down the sentence. Ryan sentenced him to five years on each of two counts, the sentences to run concurrently.

In giving Perl the maximum sentence, Ryan said he could not accept the jury's recommendation for leniency because Perl had "willfully and deliberately" withheld information from the government in its investigation of a Soviet spy ring.

Perl, the father of a 10-month-old son, was taken to the Federal House of Detention following sentencing to wait prison assignment. His wife, Henrietta, bade him smiling farewell as he left the court house.

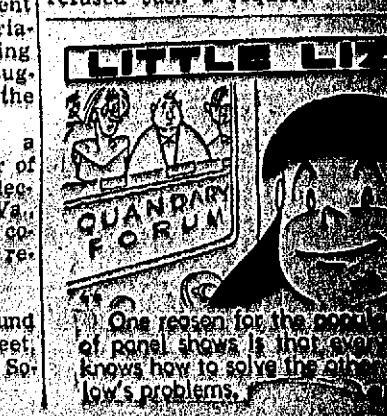

Perl was convicted May 22 on two counts of a four-count indictment returned against him in March 1951. The counts charged that he lied to a federal grand jury when he testified that he was unacquainted with Rosenberg, who is scheduled for execution June 19 and with Sobell, who is serving a 30-year prison sentence.

Execution Stay Denied Rosenbergs

NEW YORK (AP) — The U. S. Court of Appeals today denied a stay of execution to condemned atom spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg scheduled to die in Sing Sing prison's electric chair June 18.

Judge Thomas E. Swan, Emanuel Bloch, counsel for the Rosenbergs, that he might apply for a stay before the Supreme Court of the United States. The court already has refused three times to review the case.

Bloch said several days ago all else failed he would appeal President Eisenhower for clemency. Eisenhower previously refused such a request.

Religious Films Take Over Movies

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 (UPI)—Dore Schary telephoned from New York with the biggest news out of MGM this year—and after he heard him out, I believe it. Ava Gardner and Vittorio Gassman are to be starred in a giant religious spectacle called "The Prodigal," which will be made in Palestine at a cost of millions.

The story is based on the Bible, the story of the prodigal son and will be a tremendous in scope as was "Quo Vadis."

I believe there is influence to make another spectacle by the production of "Quo Vadis" is expected to make more than any film since "Gone With the Wind" and another important factor.

Paramount has C. B. DeMille's "Ten Commandments" coming up 29th has "The Bible" in three days of worry and stress people turn more and more to religious themes.

Wayne Fox produced "House of Wax" as his last at Warner's before he and Jack Warner parted company. Fox may not have enjoyed making the picture which was not an act—but the cash return is literary masterpiece.

So, "House of Wax" and "The Ten Commandments" are now doing business with Eddie Small to produce and write, respectively, another picture, "The Mad Magician."

The boy they want is Mel Ferrer, currently in England for "King Arthur, Etc." But who will be here late in the summer when the small picture will start.

Bette Davis is leaving Hollywood to live in Vermont, Maine. The message she sent to me, but says she is not giving up pictures. When she and Gary Merrill make pictures they will come to Hollywood, but will return immediately to New England.

Bette has been so much better that she's been walking in the woods every day and getting her strength back after her very serious osteomyelitis of the jaw.

As for picture commitments, Bert Friedlob is looking for a story for Bette to start in October. If his story is not ready, however, she will first do a picture for Paramount.

In a letter from Lex Barker the says Lana Turner was looking over his shoulder as he wrote it. He states he won't be back in Hollywood for two months. He's leased an apartment in Paris for the pleasure of remaining with the lovely Lana as long as he can.

Congress Is Itching to Adjourn

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, June 5—This Congress, itching to close up shop by July 1, probably will have set no records in lawmaking by the time it does end this session. It hasn't done much in the form of major legislation yet.

Some of its tardiness is understandable, particularly on the money bills. The new Eisenhower administration needed time to look over President Truman's budget and try to cut it down. It sent up its recommendations late.

President Eisenhower himself, much to many people's surprise, has been able to maintain with Congress the same friendly relationship he insisted upon from the time he stepped into the White House.

It's already paid some dividends, although not 100 per cent by any means.

This week at a White House conference with his Republican leaders in Congress, he got them to abandon an idea they seemed bent on pushing through: threatening to shut off U. S. money for the United Nations if Red China were admitted.

Eisenhower said he doesn't want Red China in the U. N., either, but he said threatening the U. N. was a poor way to frustrate the Communists.

At the same time he has a man-size job on his hands trying to get the Allies to see the American viewpoint. Some of them, Britain, for instance, think Red China should be admitted when there's a settlement of the war in Korea.

Eisenhower wanted Congress to extend the reciprocal trade agreements act without changes that would shut out more foreign goods than had been excluded in years.

There was an attempt to write heavy restrictions into the act. But this week too Eisenhower won a victory by approving a mild compromise in the House bill. It seems likely to sail through pretty much as he wanted, and at a time when he is trying to encourage free world trade.

He has handled his relations with Congress so carefully, in public anyway, that no one in Congress has expressed any personal hostility to the man in the White House. But that doesn't mean he can smile his way through all the time.

He's had some setbacks and may have more before this session ends.

His own Republican leaders brushed him aside on his request for congressional approval of a resolution to condemn Russia for breaking wartime agreements and enslaving the people of Eastern Europe.

His leaders wanted to add a criticism of former Democratic Presidents Truman and Roosevelt who had made the agreements with the Russians.

The Democrats balked, saying

DOROTHY DIX
Deserts Invalid Mate

Dear Miss Dix: Four years ago, when I was 15, I married a very nice boy. In a year we had a son, and were very happy together. Two years ago I was stricken with polio. I was in the hospital more than a year and, shortly after I came home, my husband said he didn't love me any more, and left. My baby and I went to live with my mother. I suppose my husband can't be blamed for not wanting a wife in a wheelchair, but I still love him and miss him very much. Friends do come to see me, but I am lonely. In a few weeks I'll go back to the hospital again for an operation. I need friends so much; how can I meet people and have them like me?

W. T.

Heartless Coward

Answer: Your husband just did not have the courage to face his responsibilities like a man. Being so very young when he married, he apparently believed that marriage was a romantic dream with no strings attached. Like a disillusioned child, he ran from his obligations to pursue his own ideas of fun. In time he'll learn how wrong he was, and let's hope it won't be too late.

You have the comfort and consolation of your son and your family. As you learn, in spite of your affliction, to get around, mix with people outside your home, and make a place for yourself in church, school and community life. You will meet many fine persons whose affection for you will be motivated by admiration—not pity. When you get out of the hospital, find out just what you can do in these fields to be useful and help others. While you are in the hospital, talk with the nurses, the welfare workers, the representative of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. They may have suggestions for building your social life. You face a difficult future, but you have the courage to meet it.

Dear Miss Dix: I have a 12-year-old girl friend who has no worries. I'm 14. She is very loud and unmanly. She seldom stays in her own house during the day since her mother works nights and sleeps during the day. Consequently, the girl is on the streets and is chased by all the boys. They take her for something she isn't, but may turn into if someone doesn't take an interest in her.

ROBERTA C.

Answer: Since you seem to take a sincere interest in the girl—and it's a good thing someone does—why not enlist your mother's aid in improving the child? The girl is too young to be responsible for her own actions, and since she is being woefully neglected by her mother, some adult should step into the picture and help her. Your mother, or a sympathetic teacher, could do the job. See what you can do to enlist aid.

Dear Miss Dix: Last summer I went with a certain boy, and since we saw each other quite often, I became tired of him and we broke off. Now I realize I was wrong, and that I love him very much. We meet on the street and say "Hi" to each other, but that is all. I know he doesn't go steady. And neither do I. He's 18 and I'm 16.

Answer: Since the boy is friendly when you meet him, and does not have a steady girl, the way is wide open for a renewal of friendship. There's no reason why you can't break the ice by inviting him a party at your house.

They'd vote for Eisenhower's idea, but not for the revised version. The Republican leadership, knowing it didn't have enough votes in its own ranks to outvote the Democrats, ditched the whole business.

Eisenhower didn't put up any fight on the resolution. Maybe he didn't look on it as a major issue anyway. But he has also been brushed aside on two major issues he has talked of wanting.

One was admission of Hawaii as the 49th state and the other was changes in the Taft-Hartley labor act. Statehood for Hawaii has been getting the go by but Republican leaders are now talking about making it the next order of business in the Senate in an effort to win approval. Revisions of TH at this session is practically a lost cause.

For the failure on TH Eisenhower can probably blame himself more than anyone else. There were lengthy Congressional hearings on revisions in the labor act. But Eisenhower sent no recommendations to Congress, either directly from the White House or through Secretary of Labor Durkin.

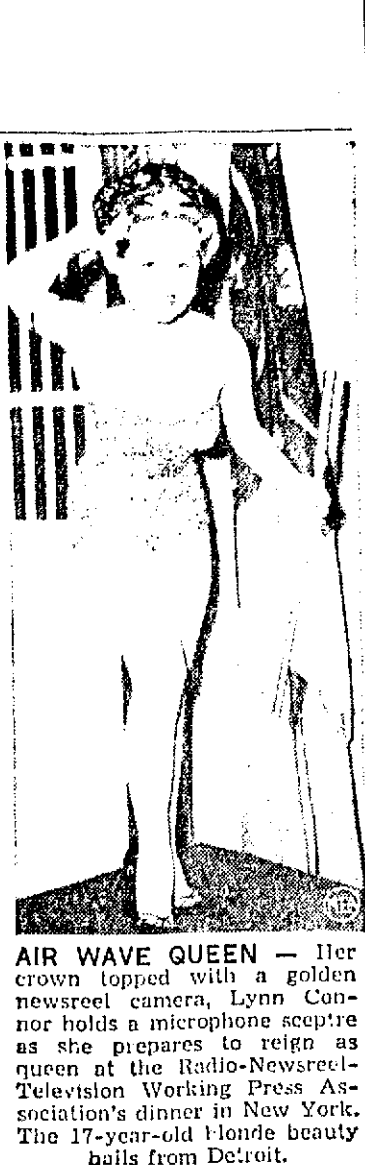

This Eisenhower-Durkin silence was astonishing to many. Durkin, while a union leader before becoming secretary, said he thought the whole TH act should be wiped out. After becoming secretary, Durkin said it could be kept if changed, but he never appeared before a committee to express the administration's views nor did he make any recommendations in public.

Eisenhower will face one of his biggest and most critical tests on taxes. He asked Congress not to reduce taxes this year but to extend the excess profits tax, due to end June 30, until Dec. 31. There is strong opposition in the Capitol against this request.

Her crown topped with a golden newsreel camera, Lynn Connor holds a microphone sceptre as she prepares to reign as queen at the Radio-Newsreel-Television Working Press Association's dinner in New York. The 17-year-old blonde beauty bails from Detroit.

Dear Miss Dix: Should a widow wear her wedding ring? Some of my friends say no, and some say she should, unless she's looking for a second husband.

Arkansas Loses AMA Election

INJURED FATALITY. TURKLE, Ark. (AP)—Five-year-old Macmerelda Gonzales of Stacy, Ark., was injured fatally yesterday when she stepped from behind a "rolling store" into the path of a truck.

State Trooper Bill Reed said the girl tumbled onto Old Highway 61, about 2 1/2 miles north of here, into the path of a truck driven by William Edward Stone, 24, of Memphis.

Although the Pacific usually is considered rougher than the Atlantic, the Atlantic may seem rougher to the casual tourist because shipping lanes pass through latitudes which are subject to storms, while many Pacific routes lead through quieter latitudes.

Because of the vast spaces across which winds blow, the Pacific Ocean usually is considered rougher in comparable latitudes than the Atlantic.

Some poor hypochondriacs who will talk about himself expensively for days, but when someone comes to you in deep and serious trouble, you have nothing to suggest but bromides.

Randolph shrugged, and spread his hands, palms up. "I am not now," he said. "That I know," Brown answered heavily. "But do you?"

A silence settled over us, broken only by Todd's quick movements. He seemed in a hurry to get through.

"You're hiding something," Todd shot her a frightened glance. "No, Mrs. Redding. What have I to hide?"

Carliotta gave him her heavy-lidded stare. "What did you really find upstairs?"

"I don't believe you," Carliotta said. "You know something and you are just picking your time to tell it."

Todd's face turned the color of dirty linen. If ever I saw mortal terror, that was it. He opened his mouth without being able to make a sound—but Mrs. Macbeth felt no such inhibition. Her grim visage came closer to the wicket, she leaned through and looked up and down the table. Her hands were where her hips would have been if she had a waistline, and her expression was defiant.

"Tammie's a nervous boy, and I'll not have him badgered. You had best leave him alone. We've seen a few things, him and me, and some of what we've seen could be a hanging matter. Fair warning now."

"Charming woman. I like her better every time I meet her," Randolph remarked. For once his light tone was unconvincing. His long fingers rolled a piece of bread into pellets and ranged them around his plate.

"Meggie, you just don't know how to love a man. He seemed to have lost all self-confidence."

I had noticed something, and decided to take a long shot, although I was none too sure at all of my ground.

"What's that piece of paper sticking out of your pocket, Todd?" I asked. "You didn't have it before."

It he had any idea of putting me off, Brown put a stop to it by getting up and walking quietly toward him, heavy footed. Todd buckled. With a despairing glance around, he reached into his pocket and pulled out a somewhat crumpled sheet of the ship's blue paper, covered with Larry's boyish scrawl.

"I ought to show it to the captain first," he blurted, but he handed it over.

State Job Study To Be Made

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A study to determine if state employees doing the same kind of work are in the same pay brackets will be recommended at the Arkansas Legislative Council here 12.

Sen. Tom Allen of Brinkley, Council chairman, will urge the Council to undertake the study, proposed by Gov. Cherry.

Allen said that "job classification would expedite budget preparation and would enable the General Assembly to provide more equitable salaries for state employees who are engaged in similar work."

Cruise with Death

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR. "RANDY," Carliotta said in her earnest tone, "I want to tell you something."

Randolph looked at her from a great distance. Long years of practice in terminating the confessions of egocentric patients had given him a skill in avoiding what he didn't want to hear.

The yacht began to pitch more violently now.

Lisa turned to Brown, who was holding a reddened handkerchief to his nose.

"Come, old friend. Before this gets too bad again, let me see if I can patch you up. We'll see you later, Ginger."

Their movement brought me out of my trance-like state. I did not know what I was going to do, but I knew that I was not going to be left alone and unharmed in the salon with Carliotta. I could take no unnecessary risks now, I had too much to accomplish. I would go to my room and try to think things out, and this time there would be no nonsense about not locking the door.

Alone in my cabin, I lay down on my berth, and in imitation of Lisa wedged myself in with pillows. The Spiritus was tossing violently again, but was not so out of control. We had better direction at the helm, and for the moment, in spite of what had happened, I had to be glad of it.

I tried to think things out. Whatever Jonas believed, or pretended to believe, we were as far as ever from knowing what had shot Opdyke. It had now become acutely my own dilemma, for until the culprit was found, Robert could not be cleared.

As I fret and meditated and napped, the sound of the triangle announcing lunch woke me up, and I found myself ravenous. The sky was clearing and the waves were quieter. Clearly the Spiritus had survived. I washed my face in cold water, put my dress back on, and went down to the dining salon in search of food. It struck me as odd that I could think about eating, when Robert and I were in such trouble, but food I had to have before I could do anything else.

Todd was sweeping up some broken china, racks were on the table, and all the other passengers except Larry and Robert were there before me. The aroma of a stew floated from the galley, and it held us as flypaper holds flies. We were a sorry-looking lot, battered and patched up.

When the stew was served on the tin plates which did for the crow, there was no talk about its being inedible. We cleaned our plates, and Lisa set the example of sopping up the gravy with a piece of bread. Across the table, Gay and Carliotta eyed each other with open hostility. It took Gay to say at last what all of us were beginning to think.

"Where is Larry?" "I thought you knew," Carliotta answered coldly.

A frightened look came into Gay's eyes. "He left me hours ago. Isn't he in his room?" "How would I know?"

Gay's hands fluttered like birds. "But somebody ought to call him. He ought to eat."

By long habit of command, Lisa took over. "Todd, go tell Mr. Redding that a meal—of sorts—is being served."

Without a word, Todd picked up the triangle and left the room. A change had come over him. He was no longer either cheery or servile, he was glum. The triangle chimed along the decks above us, then came a silence, chimes again, and then a longer silence. We had polished off the tin plates by the time he came back. He started to clear away without volunteering any information.

"Did you find him, Todd?" Lisa asked with asperity.

"He was not in his cabin, m'lady. I couldn't find him."

Gay gave a startled exclamation and pressed both hands to her breast. "Randy, did you talk to him?" He said he was going to see you."

Randolph looked annoyed at being brought into it, and weighed his answer before he gave it.

"Yes. He came to me. He was a very much disturbed, almost incoherent. He had been drinking all day, you know. I gave him a sedative, and suggested that we continue our conversation when he was calmer."

"Was that all the help you had for him?" asked Brown.

Randolph went on the defensive. "He was not prepared to be very candid with me. It made it hard to do anything for him. I thought that when he had had time to think things over, I could be of more use. It is not easy to assist people who are still concealing their motives."

"What did you think he was concealing?" Brown asked aggressively.

"Some information as to the identity of the murderer."

Gay gasped. "But he didn't know... How could he..."

Carliotta looked at her with such hatred that I almost expected to see the knife come whistling across the table.

Brown grunted sarcastically. "What (frauds) you psychiatrists are! You have endless time for

There is some hope that Arkansas may have more than one education at television channel.

President John T. Caldwell of the University of Arkansas said that he has learned that the Federal Trade Commission will probably extend the time for reserving educational channels.

The present deadline for filling of educational stations expired Tuesday. At that time only the Central Trades and Labor Council of Little Rock (A. F. of L.) had made an application in Arkansas.

The statement by Caldwell said hopes that the university might eventually sponsor an educational channel.

Officer Tells of Salvaging Documents

WASHINGTON (UP)—A navy officer testified today he salvaged a mass of waterlogged government documents which he said apparently had been thrown into the Patuxent River in Chesapeake Bay in an attempt to destroy them.

Lt. J.G. Roy L. Bergeron told a House Judiciary Subcommittee the documents included many letters, all of which were to or from Turner L. Smith, one-time aide to T. Lamar Caudle, former assistant attorney general fired by former President Truman for his outside activities.

Subcommittee Counsel Robert A. Collier said many of the documents had to do with tax cases handled by Caudle's division in the Justice Department.

Bergeron said he recovered the 1951. He told the subcommittee the documents in early December, 1951. He told the subcommittee he found three or four dozen separate sheets of correspondence and a larger paper sack. The sack, he said, bore marks indicating it had been used to make a bundle of the papers. He judged it had once been weighted.

He found the papers, Bergeron said, on the beach and in the water near his former home close by the Patuxent River Naval Air Station.

Bergeron said he "guessed" the sack had been dumped in an area "labeled Chairman Kenneth B. Kentland's office, around which Mr. Truman often cruised, had 'frequently anchored'."

But Chairman Kenneth B. Kentland (R-NY) said the subcommittee, which is investigating the Justice Department, will not go further into that unless it gets more definite information linking the discarded papers to the yacht's travels.

Bergeron testified that Smith, author of receipt of all the letters found, kept a trailer a Solomon's Island across the Patuxent from the air station. He said it was "quite possible that the package was dropped from a pier and was carried across the river."

Bergeron said he tried and failed to interest radio commentator Fulton Lewis in the papers and then, at the insistence of naval intelligence, turned them over to the FBI.

The subcommittee, which obtained the documents from the Justice Department, displayed a large number of them at today's hearing.
